root of the world's financial troubles. "I do not blame the people of the United States for anything. If you can spend money for armaments, you can pay. I would like to see President-elect Roosevelt call another group of experts to face the present economic troubles."

FRANCE SIDETRACKS DEBATE ON DEBTS

PARIS, Nov. 29.—(UP)—Immediate debate on the French war debt to the United States was sidetracked by the government today in the Chamber of Deputies.

Louis Marin, Nationalist deputy who prepared a motion opposing payment of any description, agreed to a resolution proposed by Minister of Budget Maurice Palmade that the finance commission consider the debt question before beginning the chamber debate.

Palmade, on behalf of the government, said it would be awkward if parliament adopted a definite attitude before the cabinet had the opportunity to make its decision.

Premier Edouard Herriot was expected to outline the government position before the finance commission. The debate was expected to begin Friday.

The cabinet will meet Wednesday morning to decide its attitude on the debt question.

DEMOCRATS TO BRING UP FARM RELIEF EARLY

enacted in the lame duck session.

This Democratic congressional leaders, it was pointed out, are anxious that a complete program be ready in order that they can concentrate on its passage and perhaps avoid an extra session of congress.

All of them who have called on Roosevelt are opposed to an extra session, it was declared, but feel that unless definite progress is made with the beer and farm relief issues, one will be necessary. The beer bill, if enacted into law, it was argued, would produce a revenue of at least $300,000,000 which would go toward balancing the federal budget, a task they all agree will be a difficult one.

The governor in his discussions with Pittman was believed to have touched upon the silver question.

of importance to the far western states because of their trade with the Orient where silver is the standard of exchange.

GARNER PLANS TO DELAY VOTE ON DRY REPEAL

14 state legislatures meet the next few months.

Democratic senate leaders said, meantime, that the repeal question would be submitted first to a Democratic conference at which an effort would be made to "find a repeal resolution that will carry out the Democratic prohibition platform."

There is no senate disposition to delay a vote on the repeal issue but Democratic leaders intend carefully to canvass the sentiment of their colleagues before fixing upon the terms of the repeal resolution.

WILL ROGERS SAYS:

BEVERLY HILLS, Nov. 29.—(To the Editor of The Register:) Hey Rip: I got a "Believe it or Not" for you. A fellow in Beverly Hills says the Literary Digest polls should be abolished on account of their accuracy. He don't mind a straw vote if it's not right. But he is "again" the true ones. He says read 'em and vote with the majority. But here is what he don't explain, what makes the majority in the straw vote?

No, you are wrong, Chaplin didn't write that, or Laurel and Hardy, or Joe Brown. It was my friend the Republican editor of the Beverly Hills Citizen in a convincing editorial. It was his contribution to "what can the Republican party do to get their hands back in those U. S. mail sacks again."

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

WASHINGTON

POWER

The Federal Power Commission has gone Democratic already.

So have a number of other bureaus whose officials want to hold their jobs after Roosevelt gets in.

This is no time to let old policies stand in the way of keeping a job. They are too hard to get.

That is one explanation of why the Power Commission granted its first license to a state this week.

It gave Illinois the right to build a dam and three units on the Des Plaines and Illinois rivers. That is the first license given to a state in the history of a commission.

It will not be the last.

BONUS

Similar foresight was exhibited by Director Hines of Veterans Affairs in proposing a Democratic kind of a cash bonus. He wants to pay off a higher present day value on the insurance certificates.

The government would break even on it in the long run because the present day value would still be much less than the maturity value.

The idea will not get very far as it stands. Veterans' organizations are opposed to it because it will not give the veterans the maturity amount promised. There is no indication that Mr. Hoover will accept it. Roosevelt might.

Congress might work out some compromise which would be satisfactory all around. That is not in sight yet.

INFLATION

Nobody need get excited about the Rankin idea for issuing printing press money. The bill is not going through. You could not get more than a handful of votes for it in either House.

When and if inflation is undertaken it will be done differently. It probably will not even be called by that name. What the majority of those interested have in mind is the stimulation of easier money, easier credit and higher prices.

LOANS

Our dollar is more solid now than it has ever been. It is more solid than there is any reason for. Banks are loaded with cash and Government bonds. They say they cannot find enough good commercial loans. F. P. C. Chairman Pomeroy says some banks are selfishly trying to keep too liquid and will not make even desirable commercial loans. That charge is just as true today as when President Hoover made it a year ago. The situation has not changed much.

BUDGET

The $700,000,000 budget savings promised by the President is really only $550,000,000 net. That $550,000,000 includes the Veterans cuts. It is impossible Congress will go along with that item.

In handling its figures the Government is in the same position you would be in valuing your assets. If you were fixing valuation for the tax collector you would be inclined to be pessimistic about your worth.

If you were trying to get a loan from the bank you would be optimistic. That leeway might slide as much as 50 per cent of your value.

Economies cannot be counted until they are in the bag. They are a long way from that now.

NORRIS

This is the last time we shall ever have to worry about short sessions of Congress and delays in installing new administrations. Thirty-seven state legislatures meet next year. That should assure ratification of the Norris constitutional amendment before next December.

It is one of the most important steps toward orderly government that has been taken in ten years. The author is Senator George Norris of Nebraska.

HEARTBREAK

Those close to Senator Jones know his defeat killed him.

He was one of the few sincere and honest men in Congress. He got that way from personal experiences while he was a child. You would have been a prohibitionist too if you had suffered as he had. Only his intimate friends knew the story.

His state went wet on him. He could not change his deep-rooted dry feeling fast enough to keep up with the new generation.

JEHOL

The Japs cannot move into Jehol before spring. Their plan to capture that province has been held up because they feared the world reaction. If the League of Nations had not been considering the Manchurian question the Japs would have gone ahead.

The movement is only a matter of time. All Jap statesmen look on Jehol in the same category as the other Manchurian provinces already held.

NOTES

You can safely wager your fortune that Senator J. Ham Lewis will vote for beer this time.

Ratification in Illinois following his failure to approve the Bingham Beer Bill at the last session is the reason. . . . The wine people are raising Cain about all the attention being given beer without regard to them. . . . They are preparing a formidable lobby as wines can float in on the beer wave. . . . Felix Frankfurter, the Harvard prof, will probably be Solicitor General under Roosevelt. . . . If not he will go to Oxford to teach. . . . The publisher of a large Rocky Mountain newspaper lost a thousand subscribers a day for a time supporting Mr. Hoover during the campaign. He stuck to it.

shall he find faith on the earth?" "Christology" is the principal theme of the evangelist. "Know the unknown man" is his slogan. Services are at 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. The subject tonight is "What Is Our Standard?"

nevertheless. . . . A dark horse in the race for the Agricultural Cabinet post in the new cabinet is M. L. Wilson, Montana. . . . A light horse is the son of former Secretary of Agriculture Wallace at Des Moines.

NEW YORK

By James McMullin

CITY

Comptroller Berry's new plan for city finances is more acceptable to the banks than they expected it to be. They do not share his optimism about the city not needing to borrow money in December—but signs that city authorities will follow Berry's proposals may help the interim financing quite a bit.

Tammany is unquestionably going to make strenuous efforts to rehabilitate itself with the cash dispensers. State legislative moves to reduce mandatory city salaries will meet less opposition than expected. The leaders are telling the faithful they had better take a paycut with their jobs or maybe next year there won't even be any jobs to have.

Newsreel shots of Mayor-elect O'Brien pledging economy and efficiency have been on display in local theaters. In several known cases they were greeted with a torrent of hoots and howls. Caustic comments on O'Brien are heard from many sources which normally laugh off evidence of city misrule.

LEHMAN

Governor-elect Lehman still retains a special partnership in the banking concern of Lehman Brothers. This might easily become a source of embarrassment and the financial district generally expects him to relinquish it before his formal inauguration. If he does so he will be notably sacrificing personal income.

KUHN-LOEB

The appointment of Elisha Walker as a partner of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in place of J. J. Hanauer will mark a significant change of policy by one of the most important private banking houses in the country. For years this company has remained aloof from the active struggle for new business—content with the income from a large business in railroad financing built up in the past.

Walker's appointment is a recognition of changing conditions and the new broom is expected to be pretty active. Hanauer was a railroad expert; Walker's contacts are industrial.

It is worth mentioning that if security affiliates of commercial banks become legally unpopular, the private banks including Kuhn, Loeb will fall heir to some very sweet business and it behooves them to be prepared. Walker's attempt to throw the security affiliate overboard when he was head of Transamerica was an important factor in his clash with Giannini. No one in the financial district holds his ousting against him.

RECEIVERSHIPS

The Irving Trust Company's remarkable collection of receiverships is the cause of a good deal of private controversy in Wall Street. The company has handled more than 4000 receiverships in three years. There are doubts among leaders of the legal profession as to the advisability of this virtual monopoly. Take International Match. That's a job for a man like the President of the United States—not for a clerical department in a bank.

Right now five other New York banks are somewhat annoyed at the Irving, which is blocking their attempt to dispose of collateral held against the defaulted loans of National Electric Power. Any receiver would do the same but somehow the banks feel it is unclutter for another bank to act that way.

The Irving Trust originally got into this type of business because one of its authoritative officers was sold the idea by judges that receiverships ought to be kept out of the hands of lame ducks and shysters. This officer had—and still has—active opposition within the ranks of his own associates to the bank acting as official receivers for this district.

The bank lost plenty of money during the first two years it tried its hand at the business, but the third year was distinctly profitable.

PENNEY STORE TOY SHOW BIG SUCCESS

A large crowd of children and adults was present last night at the J. C. Penney store when Santa Claus was present for the opening of Toyland.

The large store was filled to overflowing within a few minutes after the doors were opened at 7 o'clock and the doors had to be temporarily closed until the store had been partially cleared of the first crowd of Santa enthusiasts, according to Manager F. A. Jones.

"A special plan had been evolved to take care of a large crowd," Jones said today, "but the crowd was so much larger than we had anticipated that the system was quickly overtaxed. The crowd was unusually good natured and well behaved."

The store is filled with Christmas merchandise and includes an unusually large display of toys which proved a delight to the visiting throngs.

Barton was rendered unconscious at the time and Glimpe was released when it appeared that Barton would recover. BEAUTIFUL STORY TO BE HELMS' SUBJECT

In discussing the Isle of Patmos, which he has personally visited, Dr. Elmer E. Helms, nationally known pastor and speaker who is giving a series of talks at the First M. E. church this week, especially stressed the barren condition of the island last night.

He explained that it contains only about 16 square miles and that the living conditions are very severe. Water is very scarce and the only supply is from cisterns. "It was a difficult place in which to live," he said, "especially in the days when John was there, for then there were no cisterns. This probably explains some of the imagery of the waters of life in Revelations."

Tonight Dr. Helms will speak on "The Most Beautiful Story Ever Written." This is to be a popular and inspirational message according to Dr. George A. Warner, pastor, Thursday at 2:30 p. m. Dr. Helms will address a women's meeting on "Woman—B. C. and A. D."

Employment of three attorneys to represent defendant cities, towns and water companies of the upper Santa Ana basin in the injunction suit brought in Federal court by the Irvine company, was decided upon yesterday at a meeting of a committee representing the defendants. The meeting was held in the office of the Riverside Water Company.

Members of the committee at yesterday's conference were: Francis Cuttle, chairman of the Water Conservation association, who is serving as chairman of this special committee; R. W. It was decided to employ three attorneys, one from each of the counties involved in the action, to handle the injunction suit. Hale said this morning that he recommended H. C. Head, Santa Ana attorney, be selected as the Orange county attorney. These recommendations will be taken before representatives of the defendant groups by Cuttle.

DRIVER DENIES RESPONSIBILITY IN DEATH CRASH

Denying responsibility for the automobile crash on the night of October 21, last, which cost the lives of three Orange high school students, and alleging contributory negligence on the part of Edwin Johnson, fourth high school student and driver of the other automobile involved, Rolf Von Eckartsburg has filed an answer to three damage actions filed within the past few weeks by parents of the dead boys and girl.

Damage suits naming Von Eckartsburg as defendant and demanding a total of $70,967.50 have been filed by Mrs. Beale Leutinger, mother of Mark Leutinger, one of the victims; J. O. Hill, father of Dorothy Hill; and Edward Levi Worden and Mrs. Adna Madge Woodell, father and mother of Ronald L. Worden, third student killed in the crash.

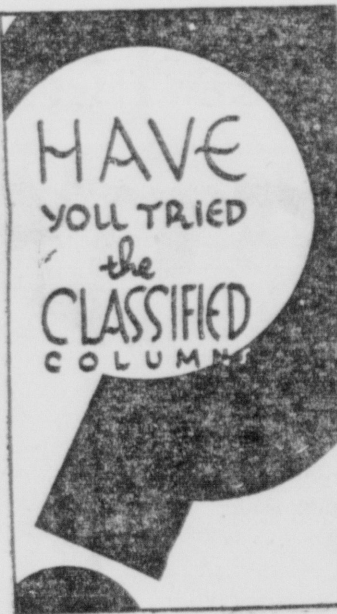

The damage actions filed by the parents of the dead students alleged that Von Eckartsburg was driving his automobile on South Main street, Orange, in a careless and negligent manner and on the wrong side of the highway without regard to traffic.

Von Eckartsburg, in his answers to the three suits denies these allegations and alleges that any damages due to the accident were contributed to by the dead students and the driver of the automobile. He also alleged in his answers that the Johnson automobile was operated in a negligent and careless manner and the accident was unavoidable as far as he is concerned.

Women will buy and HIDE that's where they're wise!

Women are smarter than men in at least one respect: They'll buy Gift Slippers for their men EARLY in the season while sizes, styles and colors are complete, and HIDE THEM until wanted! Men invariably wait until the last minute! Well, anyway, this ad is addressed to women:

Men's Gift Slippers!

We'd take a chance this year on a pair of WOOLLIES for him! Not much of a chance, because you ought to hear what men are saying about them! $2 a pair is reasonable.

We have the Daniel Green Comfy at $1.75, the Operas at $2.75, fine Everetts at $3.50, and so on. Some with soft soles and rubber heels. See every model in every color on our display table!

SEEK TO KEEP OLIVE PIONEER MACHINES OUT OF FIRE AREAS TO BE THURSDAY

Steps to bring about enforcement of existing laws regarding traffic and parking at or near fires, the co-operation of the several police agencies and the enactment of new laws, if necessary, were taken at the meeting of the Orange County Firemen's association at Garden Grove last night, when Chief F. W. Crocker, Newport Beach; Chief E. J. Tobias, Garden Grove, and Homer McCormick, Santa Ana, were named as a committee to investigate present conditions and to recommend action by the association.

The matter was brought to the attention of the firemen by Chief Tobias, who had been called to assist at a ranch fire near Anaheim. He found automobiles blocking the driveway leading to the house; cars parked on the roadways so as to impede the progress of approaching apparatus from Anaheim and declared that the fighting of the fire was delayed from three to five minutes because of this interference.

Homer McCormick told of the Santa Ana ordinance which forbids a car to follow fire apparatus within 150 feet and to park in the same block in which a fire is in progress. Laguna Beach and Tustin delegates reported fine cooperation on the part of the police. President R. D. Woodward, of Laguna Beach, telling of fines imposed on a number of offenders. Education of the public regarding the menace will be one of the aims of the movement, President Woodward said.

Future fighting of fires in homes and buildings with the fog-streams now employed in battling all well fires, was predicted by Glenn G. Griswold, assistant fire warden of the Los Angeles County Forestry department and battalion chief of the fire protection district, in the main address of the meeting on "Oil Well Fires." It has been proved, he said, that the use of atomized water starves a fire quicker than by use of a solid stream from a two and a half or three inch hose, and that the blaze can be extinguished with one-twentieth of the quantity of water, thus preventing heavy damage to buildings and furnishings by water. The fog-stream also permits the firemen to get closer to the blaze and covers a much larger area of the burning section in less time. The fine spray is turned quickly into steam and steam absorbs the heat and starves the fire.

It was announced that Assistant Chiefs Woodward of Laguna Beach and J. Briscoe of Newport Beach have been appointed district deputies of the state association.

Capt. C. H. Hildebrandt, Pasadena, first vice-president of the California State Firemen's association, spoke briefly as did Capt. A. C. DuRee of the Long Beach department, and Capt. A. W. Swanson of the South Gate Fire department.

A supper was served following the meeting.

No More Piles

How to End Painful Piles Without Salves or Cutting

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonard's prescription—HEM-ROID to prove how easy it is to end itching, bleeding or protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old, stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and reduces the affected parts and drives out the thick, impure blood in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and suppositories fail. McCoy Drug Store and druggists everywhere sell HEM-ROID Tablets with guarantee of money back if they do not end all Pile misery.—Adv.

Funeral services for David Fairbairn, pioneer rancher of Olive, have been set for Thursday at 2 p. m. at the First Presbyterian church of Orange, with Dr. Robert Burns McAulay in charge. Mr. Fairbairn passed away last night at his home following a stroke of apoplexy Saturday. Until this time he had been in perfect health. He had been a resident of the community for 28 years and of California for 30 years. Here's the Way to Control Those Miserable Colds So Prevalent Here Now

With Flu Increasing In Many Sections, Authorities Urge Extra Precaution Against Colds

WHILE there is no immediate cause for alarm over reports of Flu, health authorities urge everyone to take special precautions against the spread of colds just now. Colds tend to pull down body resistance and pave the way for Flu and other serious ills. Don't take chances. Avoid all colds possible. Treat every cold promptly. For greatest safety and protection follow Vicks Plan for better Control-of-Colds. Briefly the Plan is this:

TO PREVENT MANY COLDS: At that first feeling of stuffiness or nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze—Nature's usual warning that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, the new aid in preventing colds. Vicks Drops aid Nature in throwing off the infection that threatens. They prevent development of many colds.

TO END A COLD SOONER: If a cold has developed, or strikes without warning, vigorous measures are necessary. Rest as much as possible, preferably in bed. Take a mild laxative—eat lightly—drink plenty of water. At bed-time apply Vicks VapoRub. Its direct double action—continuing through the night—brings quicker relief. During the day use the convenient Vicks Nose Drops every few hours as needed. They add to comfort—help shorten the cold.

DRIVING HOME . . . ECONOMIC FACTS

A noted economist recently stated that every person, regardless of the size of his monthly income, should have a savings account of at least six times his monthly income. Why not put that account in the safest investment in the world - - - building and loan? Every dollar invested in the Santa Ana Building and Loan Association is guaranteed by the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the corporation and by the combined security of approximately 700 selected loans on homes in this community.

IN DEPTHS OF DESPAIR

MRS. MARY JONES lives in New England. Every month was a nightmare to her. Her letter says, "I suffered periodical pains through my head, backache and female weakness."

She tried everything. Visited clinics. Nothing helped her. Finally she gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial... scarcely hoping it would succeed where more expensive things had failed.

But she was surprised. Through its tonic action, it built up her health; lessened her pain. She says, "My backache is completely relieved."

PARIS LOVE

by NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENTS.

Since the death of her husband ten years previously, Kate Sayers had made $50,000,000 by continuing the manufacture in France of the now famous motor car Europa. Alfredo Santini, whom she knew only as a gigolo and a driver of racing cars, and who was in constant attendance on her, was chief of a gang of jewel thieves. Ramon Cabrero and Etienne Lejarre, salesmen at Piron's jewelry shop, had been several times by substituting imitation gems. Mrs. Sayers' daughter, Alacia, had unwittingly thwarted them once by buying a planted pearl necklace before the arrival of an accomplice. Alacia recently had fallen in love at first sight with a handsome young Frenchman whom she learned later was Armand de Pas, Prince d'Orsay, poverty-stricken pretender to the French throne. He was a salesman at Piron's, learning the business. Santini had just had fakes substituted for Mrs. Sayers' fabulous rubies when she took them to Piron's to have them reset, and Cabrero put the real rubies in the tool box of the Europa racer. Santini was to drive in the Grand Prix at Monte Carlo. An Apache girl, Victorine, jealous of Santini, told Alacia he was going to throw the race. Alacia decided to replace him with Armand, but Armand had been reset because he had handled the rubies. After seeing Armand at M. Piron's apartment, where he was detained, Alacia went to the garage at home and in the tool box of Santini's car saw a soiled chamois bag and a regular cigarette stub. She had picked up the latter when Santini interrupted her.

"It's going to be a bad night for driving," Alacia said. "Really dangerous, if you ask me! Mother, why don't you make them wait until tomorrow? Suppose they have an accident. The roads are covered with oil and I turned a complete skid coming home tonight. Do make them wait!" Santini, drawing on his gloves, bowed to her with mock courtesy.

"You are awfully solicitous for my welfare all of a sudden!" he grinned. "Very sweet of you, my dear Mademoiselle, but I think we will start for Monte Carlo just the same!"

"Oh Alfredo, do be careful!" Mrs. Sayers cried distressedly. "As Alacia says, it is awfully slippery and if anything should happen I'd never forgive myself for sending you off."

"No more dangerous than staying in Paris, belle amie!" Santini replied with audacity.

"You never said a truer word!" added Alacia grimly. But her voice was lost in the roar of the engine. The mechanic sprang aboard and the car began to move. Suddenly Alacia gripped her mother by the arm.

"Don't let him go!" she said entreatingly. "I tell you he must not go! I can't explain now, but you've got to stop him!" But Mrs. Sayers shook the hand off impatiently, running a few steps after the car and waving her chiffon handkerchief, smiling and blowing kisses as the car slid into the street. Sparks of the rain-drenched city. "Good-bye, good luck!" Mrs. Sayers called after them. "Bring back the cup, now! Where me, won't you? Be sure, don't forget! Good-bye, good-bye!" When the car had disappeared from sight, she turned back to the garage, shaking the raindrops from her cloak, and looking angrily at her daughter.

"I think you might have wished them luck!" she said disgustedly. "even if you don't like him! You might have been pleasant enough to say good-bye!"

"I didn't think it worth while," replied Alacia, buttoning her coat up under her chin, "because I expect to see him again in a very little while, and when I do, I'll say plenty."

"What do you mean?" her mother demanded. "Why were you so anxious for me to stop him, and where on earth are you headed for now? You're surely not going out again?"

"I surely am!" replied Alacia. "But since you don't seem interested in trying to help, there is no earthly use in my telling you anything except that Santini is a crook, and I'm on my way to prove it!"

A group of servants had come out to watch the departure of the famous racing car, and some of them were still standing under the portico of the tradesmen's entrance, among them Scott, the mechanic.

"Get the top up on my car," Alacia ordered, briefly. "Hurry, please, I'm pressed for time. Better run in the house, Mother!" she added. "And don't wait up for me. I may be late and I don't feel like talking."

"I think," said her mother, "that you are in a beastly mood."

"I am," the girl admitted in a low tone, "You've wrecked my act tonight by siding with the wrong person, and I'm too furious to be decent, but I don't care to talk before the servants and I haven't time to come indoors." Mrs. Sayers looked at her daughter as if she thought the girl had suddenly become demented, shrugged her shoulders, and finally disappeared into the house without another word of protest. Alacia gave her dog into Scott's charge, and jumped into the driver's seat.

"Shant I go with you, Miss?" asked the little cockney. "Hit's a terrible bad night!"

"No, thanks!" said Alacia, starting the engine. "I'll be all right!" And in another moment she was out on the wet gleam of the avenue, cautiously feeling her way over the treacherous pavings. Paris, in the rain, offers the most dangerous driving of any city in the world, and tonight it seemed to Alacia as though she would never reach her destination without a crash. The heavy car slowed and skidded around the Arc de Triomphe, turned twice to progress crabwise in the middle of the Champs Elysees, narrowly escaped collision with more than one taxi, but finally arrived at the Quai d'Orsay without injury. It was after eleven when Alacia pounded on the door and wrung a reluctant consent to go upstairs from the concierge. Then she waited with fast beating heart while slow steps in the corridor of the apartment came in answer to her summons. The old woman who opened for her, admitted that the men were still in the library, and without waiting to be announced she brushed ahead and went in. Armand and Piron sat by the little electric heater, discussing a de-canter of wine and bowl of green almonds, but the Prefet had apparently taken his departure.

"Did they lock you out?" asked Armand, greeting her. "Good! Then we'd better be married at once! You see what comes of loving a criminal!"

"I see what comes of associating with them," she said with what was meant to be an impressive air. "Unhand me, man, while I produce my evidence!"

"Tieni!" said M. Piron, resplendent in a broadcled dressing gown and crimson carpet slippers. "So you are a detective now, eh? And what new thrill has brought you back so late? Or did you perhaps come for one?" This with a wag of his head in Armand's direction.

"Do be serious!" cried Alacia. "Both of you. Please listen, because I've found out something terribly important, and every minute may count. Look at this, will you?" From the pocket of her coat she produced the stub of the cigarette with the green tip, and laid it carefully on the table under the lamp. M. Piron adjusted his nose glasses and peered at the object and then at Alacia, again with simulated horror. Armand shook his head in sorrow.

"Poor little girl!" he said. "She is reduced to picking up butts from the gutter! Piron, mon cher Piron, can we spare her a decent smoke?"

"Hush up, dummies!" said Alacia laughing despite herself. "You don't realize the significance of this priceless jewel, so I will forgive you. It is not, as you think, an emerald. It is a ruby. At least it is a darned good indication of where those rubies are, and if we hurry, we can catch up to them!"

"What?" exclaimed Armand, aroused at last. "Have you really found out something? Where did this remarkable treasure come from, anyhow?"

"I found this in Santini's tool-box," she told them. "It was lying on a bundle of chamois and in that bundle were my mother's rubies, or I'm a fool!"

"Did you see them?" demanded old Piron, eagerly. "Where are they now?"

"I did not see them," Alacia was forced to admit. "But I found them and I know. They are now on their way to Monte Carlo." And she told them, then, exactly what had occurred.

"Do you think Santini realizes what you suspect?" asked Armand slowly, when she had finished. "Did he actually see the bag in your hands?"

"I can't be sure," said she, "because the car was between us. And he doesn't know I have this other scrap of evidence: to wit, Mr. Ramon Cabrero's cigarette butt!"

"Ramon Cabrero!" exclaimed Armand. "Of course I've noticed him smoking them. He even took the trouble once, to boast that they are made for him especially."

"If M. Jessant will begin his fingerprinting there," suggested the girl, "I don't believe he'll have to go much further. It's perfectly plain that Santini and he worked together in some way. Meanwhile what are we to do?"

"Yes, what is there to do?" questioned M. Piron, doubtfully, walking up and down and flicking the tails of his dressing gown out behind him agitatedly. "You have nothing to go on except one miserable specimen of a cigarette stub and a lot of feminine intuition. Ecoutez-moi bien, I do not say you are wrong, but I am afraid it is hardly police evidence. If we call upon Jessant and tell this, he is going to be annoyed at being awakened."

"Do you mean the police can't be telephoned to at some point ahead to stop the car and examine it?" Alacia was wild-eyed at the thought. "Why can't they ask to see the car papers or something? They do that often for no apparent reason! I've even had it happen to me!"

"Ah! but that was because they were trying to catch people whose car tax wasn't paid!" Piron explained. "No, I hardly think an examination of the car itself could be arranged, even though the officials at any control are entitled to search for contraband cabbage and eggs, or even sausage, at the entrance to each town. But to get the proper instructions broadcast would take time."

"The petrol service can't help us, in the least!" said Armand, briefly. "This is either a police job, or it's not. In either case there is just one thing to do, and that is to stop Santini before he gets away, and so far we are only wasting time talking instead of acting. Alacia, is your car outside?"

"Yes!" she said. "Full of gas and oil. I hoped you'd ask that."

"Then," said Armand, "it's up to me to catch him. God knows, it matters how soon he's overtaken, it may be too late! But if he really is not suspicious, the chances are he won't try to catch those stones immediately. If he'd intended leaving them close to Paris he'd have got rid of them during the early part of the evening."

SLIDES and Jim Thorpe On Charity Game Program Here

by WILLIAM BRAUCHER

Outrushed and outgained in several of its games this year, Michigan still maintains the unbeaten record of a Big Ten champion. The answer is smartness—just Coach Harry Kipke.

Especially in the Princeton and Ohio State games Michigan demonstrated slick football. Ohio State outrushed the Wolverines all through the game, but Michigan won, 14 to 6. Princeton made 11 first downs against Michigan's 14, but Michigan's 41 yards to nine on forward passes, yet Michigan won, 14 to 7.

OVERCOMING YARDS

It was the same story in the Northwestern game. Michigan made 37 yards in five first downs, against the Purple's 105 yards in 11 first downs. Minnesota also outrushed the Wolverines, 125 yards against 85.

Quarterback Harry Newman played a very important part in winning Michigan's record clean. His passes, kicking and running have made him the quarterback on the All-America team without a doubt. Young Newman deserves a lot of credit for both courage and judgment. His name must be ranked with that of Friedman. He may even be better than Friedman. Certainly he is as good as Benny ever was.

Coach Harry Kipke, head professor of Michigan's school for quarterbacks.

But Newman is not the whole story of the Michigan football team. He is more a result than a cause. The patient building by one man has made Michigan mighty in football. The man is the 31-year-old Kipke.

HOWARD JONES, SPAULDING AND BRICKLEY ASKED

Jim Thorpe, famous Indian star at Carlisle years ago, has been secured for the program at the Santa Ana-Long Beach junior college charity football game in Municipal Bowl Friday night, it was announced definitely today by Eugene Kahen, breakfast club official, and efforts are still being made to secure Coach Howard Jones of U. S. C., Coach Bill Spaulding of U. C. L. A., and Charles Brickley, former backfield sensation at Harvard.

Kahen stated that Brickley is in San Francisco, but if returning to Los Angeles in time, he will join Thorpe in coming to Santa Ana for the benefit game, which promises to draw well for three reasons:

(1) Gate receipts will be used in community relief work by the Unemployed Association of Santa Ana, Inc.; (2) Santa Ana and Long Beach in the past always have waged outstanding football battles; and (3) Under the direction of E. J. ("Barney") Koster and Kahen, an attractive program before and at the half is being arranged, and includes, along with Thorpe and other grid celebrities, band music by the Santa Ana high school and junior college, and special stunts. It is probable that the drum and bugle corps of the American Legion, Post 131, also will perform.

Coach Bill Cook of the Dons has been contacting Jones and Spaulding, and will know today whether either will be able to attend. Jones was not at U. S. C. yesterday.

Alex Brownridge, banker, and William Ruddiman, vice president of the Unemployed Association of Santa Ana, Inc., are in charge of ticket sales for the benefit. Selling for 25 and 40 cents, the tickets have been placed in all sporting goods stores, banks, book stores and at the Unemployed association offices on North Main street. Long Beach has received a large block of reserved seats. Another block has been placed at Huntington Beach, according to Ruddiman.

Now that Coach Cook has found Dick Heffern, former Fullerton Hi line man, to be just what he has been looking for at left guard, Captain Jack Fredericks will remain at left half. "Porky" Bell at quarterback against Long Beach.

Heffern, freshman, has improved to such an extent that he is now one of the strongest cogs in the Don line, and an outstanding candidate for all-conference honors next season. Tom Carlyle and "Bono" Koral, end and tackle; and Captain Fredericks, guard and halfback, look as possible all-conference choices this year when Orange Empire conference coaches make their first annual selections.

Harold Welty, regular quarterback who wrenched his knee against Chaffey, discarded crutches this week and may be in condition for Long Beach. Had Welty not been injured, Coach Cook believes he would have been an undisputed choice for all-conference backfield honors this season.

Sunday Baseball At Bowl Opposed By S. A. Pastors

Santa Ana's city council had under advisement today an application for a permit to use the Municipal Bowl for Sunday baseball, the request coming from the management of Santa Ana's team of the Southern California Winter league.

The application was signed by approximately 30 merchants of the city. The team would give to the city all receipts over the $15 necessary for expenses.

The council received from the Santa Ana Ministerial association, E. W. Matz, president, and R. C. Smedley, secretary, a communication calling the council's attention to the fact that the association had unanimously voted to request the council to deny the baseball permit.

Although several candidates are taking daily workouts in Andrews gymnasium, the Don mentor will not conduct regular practice until next Monday night when the players, now preparing for the Santa Ana-Long Beach charity game here Friday night, will be able to report.

The league schedule: Jan. 7—Santa Ana at San Bernardino; Chaffey at Fullerton; Citrus at Riverside; Pomona, bye. Jan. 14—Santa Ana, bye; Riverside at Pomona; Chaffey at Citrus; San Bernardino at Fullerton. Jan. 21—Santa Ana at Pomona; San Bernardino at Citrus; Fullerton at Riverside; Chaffey, bye. Trojans Get Rose Bowl's Bid Tonight

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(UP)—A formal invitation to represent the West in the Pasadena Tournament of Roses game New Year's Day will be extended to the University of Southern California tonight by the Rose Bowl football committee.

The invitation was proffered at a meeting of Southern California sports representatives and California sports men, which clinched its claim as well as representative by defeating Washington university in the Turkey Day battle at Seattle for its 18th consecutive victory.

PLACARDS TELL IRISH OF TROY GRID PROWESS

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Nov. 29.—(INS)—The walls of Notre Dame's athletic dressing rooms today were plastered with pictures and newspaper clippings, depicting the prowess of Howard Jones' University of Southern California Trojans.

The pictures and clippings were pasted on the walls on orders of Coach "Hunk" Anderson, who has begun the task of painting El Trojans as a glowering boogymen. "Hunk" has discarded all talk of last Saturday's 21 to 0 triumph over Army in his determination to get his boys in the right frame of mind for their battle at Los Angeles with U. S. C. December 10. Today the Ramblers were to be sent through their first preparatory paces in the campaign of preparation for the game which will go far toward determining the national 1933 football champion.

The Irish gridmen occupied themselves yesterday in hearing their coach explain various Trojan formations and plays with the aid of the blackboard and motion pictures of last year's U. S. C.-Notre Dame tilt which the Southern Californians won, 16 to 14.

Anderson scrupulously refrained from making any reference to the Army game, apparently intent on routing all traces of speculation from the minds of his charges and thus dispelling the ome of over-confidence. The coach declared he would order more laudatory Trojan material posted on the dressing room walls, should he find that any of the Notre dame players still entertain today a measure of self-satisfaction over last Saturday's performance.

TICKET SALES SURPASS 70,000 MARK

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(UP)—The largest crowd of the Pacific coast football season was apparently assured for the Notre Dame-Southern California game December 10 today when it was announced that advance ticket sales had surpassed 70,000.

A veritable stampede of ticket buyers followed Notre Dame's victory over Army at New York Saturday. Memorial stadium seats 115,000.

THREE HOME GAMES ON DON HOOP CARD

Home games with Riverside, Fullerton and Citrus appear on Santa Ana junior college's 1932-33 basketball schedule, released today by H. E. Wilson, athletic commissioner of the Orange Empire conference.

Coach Bill Foot's Dons play Compton here December 9, Long Beach at Long Beach December 16 in preparation for their opening league game at San Bernardino January 7.

Although several candidates are taking daily workouts in Andrews gymnasium, the Don mentor will not conduct regular practice until next Monday night when the players, now preparing for the Santa Ana-Long Beach charity game here Friday night, will be able to report.

The league schedule: Jan. 7—Santa Ana at San Bernardino; Chaffey at Fullerton; Citrus at Riverside; Pomona, bye. CARIDEO Sadder But Wiser

Star of Crack Notre Dame Team Can't Win as Coach

LEARNS FOOTBALL PROBLEMS

(Frank Carideo, coached and inspired by the late Knute Rockne, inscribed his name on the football hall of fame as quarterback of one of the outstanding teams of the nation's sport history. Just two years ago at Notre Dame he was completing his most successful season, an All-American star, hailed as the greatest field general in the game. Today, as head coach at the University of Missouri, he is rounding out a season of defeat and disappointment.)

BY MEADE C. MONROE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 29.—(UP)—Frank Carideo has found in defeat a new respect for, and a new understanding of, the problems which beset a football coach.

He has found, too, a new determination to build winning teams and a new enthusiasm for the game which, in his years at Notre Dame, saw him acclaimed as one of the greatest quarterbacks of football history.

Carideo, as head coach of football at the University of Missouri here, is concluding a season of defeat and disappointment. His team has won but one game. It was beaten on one occasion by the largest score ever rolled up against a Missouri eleven.

With defeat has come realization of the difficulties met and overcome by his own former mentor, his football idol, the late Knute Rockne, in his years of building winning teams.

"Playing for Notre Dame, following where 'Rock' led, I never realized the staggering problems which confront a coach," Carideo told the United Press. "My affection for Rockne could be no greater. My respect for his accomplishments has increased tremendously in the last few months."

Carideo's compact, powerful frame was hunched before a radio loud speaker when this correspondent found him. He was listening to a play-by-play account of the Notre Dame-Army game.

"Old Hunk's going great today," he exclaimed, shaking hands with one ear still turned toward the radio set. He was referring to "Hunk" Anderson, present Notre Dame coach.

"Sympathy for Anderson?" "He's had a tough job trying to fill Rockne's shoes," Carideo continued. "Guess it's even tougher than mine. And 'Hunk' hasn't had any too much support from the students and alumni either. Good Lord, don't they realize that victory more than half the games should be considered a successful season?"

He snapped off the radio as the final score was announced, rose from his chair, and paced the floor as he answered questions.

"It's been a tough season for the kids," he said. He always refers to his players as "kids." "It's been heart-breaking, sometimes, to watch them out there fighting for sixty minutes, only to lose."

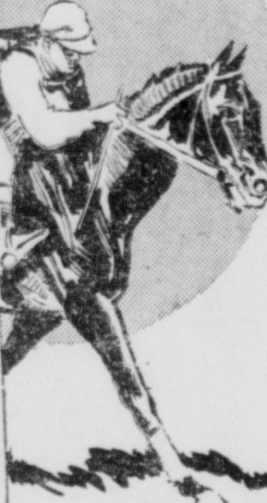

Carideo never knew what it meant to play on a losing team. Rockne's eleven won.

Hopeful for Next Season
The unsuccessful season, however, has not quenched the fire of supreme self-confidence which Carideo gained in three years of inspiring through opposing lines of Notre Dame's eleven.

Far from being downhearted, he

SAINT CAGERS OPPOSE ORANGE IN INAUGURAL

Santa Ana and Orange high schools open their 1932-33 basketball seasons at Orange tomorrow afternoon, pairing varsity and middleweight teams in two practice games.

Although no definite time has been arranged, Coaches Bill Cook and Clyde Patton of the Saint varsity and middleweights, respectively, will have their men on the Orange Hi floor and ready for action at 3:30. It is probable that the varsities will alternate with the "Bees," play two quarters and then rest while the middles play two.

Busy preparing his junior college football team for its charity game with Long Beach at Municipal Bowl Friday night, Coach Cook has placed "Jeff" Thiery, Merle Ewell and Harold Spangler, junior college students, in charge of his varsity. Thiery will make all substitutions tomorrow.

League Play Starts Dec. 8. Only six drills, including the Orange games, remain before Santa Ana's two prep teams face San Diego here Thursday and Friday, December 8 and 9, in Coast league games. Scheduled for Friday and Saturday, the double header has been moved up a day in order not to conflict with the U. S. C.-Notre Dame football game December 10. Coast Preparatory league teams will engage in two rounds of play this season, and in order to lower traveling expenses, San Diego has arranged to play each opponent twice at one meeting. Thus, it will not be necessary for Santa Ana to travel to San Diego.

Without the services of Allen ("Red") Kidder, Clair Prelinger, Francis Conrad, Floyd Montgomery, Bob Mitche, experienced basketball and other experienced basketball players now busy with football under Coach "Tex" Oliver, the Saint basketball team will start against Orange a combination of Weston Sprague and Ernest Acker, forwards; Frank Clark, center; Robert Schwarm and Al Thielen, guards.

Bill Hawkins, all-around athlete from Frances Willard junior high school, and Kenneth Cook, transfer from Bay City, Mich., have been looking good at guard, but have not been practicing as long as Schwarm and Thielen, probable starters. Cook handles himself well at guard and may open against San Diego if he keeps improving. Gilbert Colbeck, transfer from Elko, Nev.; Laurence ("Skinny") Roberts, center; Glen Bishop, Al Markel and James Siefert are others who will break into the lineup against Orange.

Class B Roster Large
Forty-three candidates, virtually one-half more than reported last season, have signed for Coach Patton's Class B team, which will open its conference schedule in preliminary games to the Santa Ana-San Diego varsity contests. Against Orange Patton will start a combination of Jesse Ojeda and Warren Harris, forwards; Leonard Lockhart, center; Richard Clem and Tom Lacy, guards.

Orville Clem and Archie Brock are running Ojeda and Harris a close race for the forward positions. Wallace Detrick, Bill Lee

SPORTS BULLETINS

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 29.—(INS)—Colgate will accept a bid to play in the Pasadena Rose Bowl football game, William A. Reid, graduate manager of athletics, said today.

"We would welcome an opportunity to play Southern California," he said.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 29.—(INS)—Emphatic denial of rumors that "Pop" Warner is to resign as head coach at Stanford came today from Richard W. Barrett, chairman of the Stanford board of athletic control.

Barrett characterized the rumors as "utterly impossible." The rumors predicted that Warner would resign and become "coach emeritus" while active duties would be taken over by Everett Nevess, assistant now to Warner.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(INS)—Bound by teasy stages for San Francisco and next Saturday's game with St. Mary's, the University of Alabama football team arrived here today.

The team was taken to Bruin field at U. C. L. A. for a workout. They will board the Southern Pacific Lark tonight for San Francisco, arriving tomorrow morning.

Frank Thomas, head coach, said his men were in "fairly good" condition, including John Cain, All-Southern fullback, who has been suffering from influenza.

Eddie Tolan On Stage To Assist Family

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(UP)—Eddie Tolan, Negro sprint star of the last Olympics, has gone into vaudeville to support his mother, brothers and sisters in Detroit, and to continue his studies in medicine.

Tolan is touring in one of the units of Bill Robinson, Negro dancer. He lectures on how to run and win foot races. Tolan, running for the United States, won the 100 and 200 meter races at Los Angeles.

FOSTER, MILLS MEET TONIGHT; NEIL FAVORITE

The pride of Irvine, young Nat Mills, comes up to the highest hurdle of his colorful career at Delhi tonight. Neil Foster, main event opponent of the hot-headed lightweight, is just about the best fighter they ever asked Mills to meet.

Foster has been installed a pre-match favorite on the strength of decisive victories over such boys as Carlos Rolden, Joe Ditch and Ed Pruitt. A Long Beach boy, Foster has never lost an amateur contest.

Mills can be counted on for his best effort, and his handlers think he has a royal chance. For one thing Mills is a greatly improved fighter since Delhi fans last saw him, and for another Mills is "fired up" for his best effort because of the altercation he had with Foster in the southside ring last week when the two exchanged several punches after being introduced.

Tony ("Knockout") Lee, colored middleweight, main-eventer on the last two programs, is favored over Reggie Kerr, popular Anaheim boy, in the semi-final.

Doyle Richards, Santa Ana, is conceded an edge over Benny Gomez, Delhi 165-pounder.

Other bouts: Alex Vanzuela, El Modena, vs. Pete Gonzales, Westminster, 138 pounds; Raoul Solis, Delhi, vs. Manuel Hernandez, Los Angeles, 125 pounds; Paul Brown, Angeles, 125 pounds; Frank Perez, Los Angeles, vs. Bill Wana, Westminster, 135 pounds; Manuel Cruz, Santa Ana, vs. Abel Sanchez, Talbert, 116 pounds; Al Arroya, Westminster, vs. Julio Moreno, Santa Ana, 140 pounds; Bert Moreno, Santa Ana, vs. Ed Rocco, Santa Ana, 116 pounds.

Mother of Smith, Trojan Star, Dead

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(UP)—Death of his mother kept Ernie Smith, All-American tackle, from rejoining the Southern California squad today as Howard Jones sent his charges through brisk drills in preparation for the Notre Dame game, December 10. The giant tackle's mother, Mrs. F. L. Smith, died following a heart attack. Smith himself was just discharged from the hospital after a week's siege of influenza.

ANAHEIM-BR E A WINNER PLAYS WHITTIER NEXT

Revamping the entire schedule, the C. I. F. today assigned Santa Ana high school to play Herbert Hoover at San Diego Saturday afternoon in a first round playoff game for the Southern California prep football championship. The Saints had tentatively been paired with Whittier.

At the same time, the committee of C. I. F. athletics—Seth M. Van Patten—announced that the winner of today's Orange league titular game between Anaheim and Brea-Olinda on Saturday would face Whittier, football league champion, Santa Barbara and Santa Maria, North section survivors, play at Santa Barbara the same day.

Inglewood, triumphant over Pomona of the Citrus Belt league in its first round engagement, drew a bye this week.

The Santa Ana-Hoover game will be played in the San Diego high school stadium with game-time 8 p. m. Santa Ana will be able to purchase tickets here tomorrow at Victor Walker's sporting goods establishment, the duets being priced at 40 cents for adults and 25 cents for students.

This game will mark Santa Ana's third trip of the season to San Diego. Coach "Tex" Oliver took his champions there early in October to play Hoover, San Diego County league champions, a non-conference night game at Navy field. The Saints won, 15-0. Two weeks later the Santa Ana team made the southward trek again, defeating San Diego Hi in the stadium, 6-0.

In rearranging the playoff draw, the C. I. F. took exception to a plan which some of the smaller schools in the series devised to suit themselves. The new deal in virtually "seeds" the outstanding eleven rather than have them eliminate each other in early rounds.

Second round opponents will be determined by lot, it is understood. The belief is prevalent that Santa Ana, Whittier, Santa Barbara and Inglewood will be left in virtually "seeds" the outstanding eleven rather than have them eliminate each other in early rounds.

Santa Ana's squad had a leisurely workout yesterday but the troupe was to resume practice today in earnest. Coach Oliver will have his team at full strength for the Hoover tussle. Cripples Conrad, Tond and Bob Mitchell returning to action this week.

LOYOLA PLANS HARD SCHEDULE FOR 1933

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(INS)—Loyola university officials said today they would offer Tom Lieb, formerly of Notre Dame, a 5-year contract as coach when his present three-year-contract expires in March.

Loyola in 1933 will play a stiff schedule including Santa Clara, U. of San Francisco, Southern California, U. C. L. A., probably Stanford, and a post-season game with Marquette, Nebraska or Loyola of New Orleans.

Boycott Against Trojan Football Schedule Denied

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(UP)—Published reports that U.C.L.A., California, Stanford and Washington had entered into a five-year agreement, threatening a boycott of Southern California if the Trojans persist in their alleged attempts to "monopolize" Memorial stadium here, were denied today by Steve Cunningham, graduate manager of U. C. L. A.

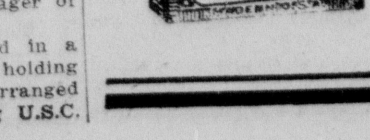

The report was published in a local newspaper last week, holding that the four schools had arranged schedules without including U.S.C.

Frank Thomas, head coach, said his men were in "fairly good" condition, including John Cain, All-Southern fullback, who has been suffering from influenza.

SIMPLE!

One simple test will absolutely prove the almost unbelievable hardness of "BLUE BLADE" edges. Take a "BLUE BLADE" and cut a piece of glass. You will be absolutely convinced that no other blade could compare with this one in keenness and temper. Shave with the "BLUE BLADE" and you will agree its performance is unequalled. Its edges are super-hardened, yet the slotted, flexing center—of an entirely different temper—bends easily when you tighten your razor. Try the "BLUE BLADE." Begin now to enjoy its many exclusive advantages.

COMMITTEE ON TAXES NAMED AT COSTA MESA

COSTA MESA, Nov. 29.—In order that the citizens of this community may be better informed on the tax question the chamber of commerce at its regular gathering in Greener's hall last night picked a committee of local business men as a tax investigating body to gather the facts and present them to the public at a meeting to be held in the near future, the date to be decided on later.

The chamber also went on record as adopting a resolution that a committee of its members carry a letter to the county supervisors with the intent in mind of getting more county work for the people in this district. John Wilcox, nurseryman, and Charles TeWinkle, merchant, were named to head this committee. The tax investigating committee includes Charles TeWinkle, O. G. Barnard, John Wilcox, H. A. Reinau and D. J. Dodge.

Adopting as its part of the Christmas tree lighting and decorating program, the chamber decided to lead in a project of placing a row of trees through the entire length of the main business district, and helping in the arrangements for decorating and lighting them for a period of two weeks during the holiday season. POLITICAL WRITER DECLARES ALLIES STILL HAVE ABILITY TO PAY THEIR WAR DEBTS

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—When anyone says that the allies "can't pay" their debts he means that payment is a lot harder than it used to be.

They still have the capacity to pay, but that capacity to pay, long ago taken as a yardstick by this country in negotiating the war debt agreements, has altered materially and is under a far greater strain.

If the original settlements were altogether fair around some revision would now be necessary to readjust the debt burden back to its relative weight in the pre-depression period.

The position of the allied debtors in demanding revision closely resembles that of American farmers who demand some form of relief from debts which, because of very low farm prices, are driving so many of them into bankruptcy and foreclosure.

Whereas the farmer frequently has no means whatever of paying, foreign governments theoretically can raise any amount of money by taxing their people. But taxes in Europe already are sky-high and must be used in greatly increased proportion for debt payments if payments are to be made on the existing schedule under present conditions.

This article merely discusses the "can't pay" phase of the vast, complicated problem, as to which the most important concrete facts are the following:

The $2,628,000,000 already paid to us by the allies has come, in effect, from German reparations, which have come, in effect, from German borrowing in the United States. Credits to Germany virtually ceased at about the time our depression began.

The allies recently virtually canceled reparations by scaling them down to $714,000,000, on an agreement technically contingent upon debt revision.

It is well to remember that this was done not for the fun of it, but because of continued insistence on regular German payments might have led to financial and economic collapse and political disturbances in Europe — the thing Hoover acted to avert in his famous moratorium. Reparations seem permanently cut off as a source of revenue.

Original settlements were based on continued improvement of Europe's economic condition, with no contemplation of or provision for the great worldwide depression.

Huge obligations such as the war debts ultimately have to be paid in goods and services. Wholesale prices over the world have declined more than a third since the debts were funded. It is pointed out by the committee of economists on intergovernmental debts, which means that the burden of payments has increased 50 per cent because the debtors must now sell half as much again in commodities to come out even.

Substantial increase in world prices would make payment that much easier for the debtors in the same way higher agricultural prices would aid our debt-ridden farmers.

The process of payment becomes a matter of transferring property rights in goods and services from debtor to creditor, which means that the debtor must build up an export surplus which the creditor nation will receive.

But we do not want goods which would compete with our own industries, so we have set up a high tariff wall against them. Other countries have followed suit. Foreign trade of the debtor countries has dropped 40 per cent since 1929, largely blocking that mode of payment.

Debts must be paid in gold. Debtor countries, except France, have almost no gold. So they must buy dollars with which to pay us. They can do that, but here again they are hard hit, for the currency with which they must buy dollars is depreciated—the British pound, for instance, from $4.86 to $2.30, representing an added debt burden of 25 per cent.

Those are the main facts as to the "can't pay" story. Sad as the story is, it does not discourage the common American contention that the debtors ought to cut their huge expenditures for armaments and that any revision must be worked out with primary consideration for provisions likely to aid general economic revival and American trade in particular.

vote tally looked most of the inhabitants of this state with the exception of the dry Sahara of Orange and Riverside counties thought the same thing: I never had the fortune or the misfortune as the case may be, to receive a message from the Lord or any of His Angels but if I ever do, I will check and double check back and forth with the sender until I understand just about how much territory the Lord expects me to cover.

Now why can't these die-hards be good sports like their President, Mr. Hoover and like Senator Shortridge and like their great dry leader Senator Fess whom you so nobly referred to in your editorial as being so proficient that he could turn either wet or dry, according to which style the voters preferred to which him pose in. It is really too bad, but from now on a lot of those boys are going to be on the outside looking in and looking on and how they will look. These big men in the forefront of their party, although defeated, took it on the chin and offered to help their successors with the job of pulling the wheels of industry out of the mire into which they have sunk over the hump. This is no time for a lot of little nibblers to be snapping at the heels of the new governmental administration. Give it a chance to function, so why clutter up your paper with the groans from this small bunch of die-hards? The idea of them making threats to fight the government just ushered in by the biggest vote ever recorded in his patriotic to say the least. I am sure there are millions of good Republicans who do not approve of such talk, the whole world knows who won this election and we are all tired out with reading the returns without listening to a lot of yelps. Plenty of Republicans together with the Democrats are sick of listening to threats by a small disgruntled contingent against the new administration, so please Mr. Burke, give us some interesting news like the

S. A. Council Turns Down Liquor Permit Requests

ACTION TAKEN IS UNANIMOUS: CITE CITY LAW

If beer and wine is to be sold in Santa Ana, it will not be by the permission of the present Santa Ana city council.

This was the verdict of the council last night when it unanimously denied two local business persons a license to sell wine and beer.

James Detrixhe, proprietor of the Green Cat cafe on North Main street, filed application for a beer permit a week ago. The matter was referred to Police Commissioner E. G. Warner. In the meantime, Ruth Jenkins of the Ruth Jenkins Sandwich shop at 1205 South Main street, filed a similar application.

Warner's report on the applications was backed by all members of the council.

He recommended that the applications be denied on the following grounds:

1. Santa Ana voted in favor of local option in 1931 and that law has never been repealed.
2. Santa Ana has an ordinance (No. 52) which forbids the sale of intoxicating liquors.
3. At the recent election the city of Santa Ana voted against repeal of the Wright act by a majority of 2261 votes.

Compliments Police

In recommending that the applications be denied, Warner said: "While I deplore his (Detrixhe's) desire to sell liquor at his place of business, I have far more respect for him and his straightforward manner in asking for a permit than I have for men who have been running 'blind pigs' in our fair city."

Warner also took occasion to compliment the police department on its diligent work against liquor traffic in Santa Ana since Floyd W. Howard has been chief of police and read a list of figures tending to show that the department's liquor arrests had been numerous during the past 18 months.

LIFE STORY OF FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

By Leland M. Ross and Allan W. Grobin

(This intimate story of the life of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, beginning with the time his father took him as a 5-year-old to call on his close friend, Grover Cleveland, the President of the United States, carries the reader through an interesting boyhood on the family farm at Hyde Park, N. Y., his student days at Groton, Harvard and Columbia Law School, and the development of his political career, which began with a New York State Senatorship. This biography is entirely authentic. The preceding installment told how F. D., while Assistant Secretary of the Navy in 1918, refused to run for Governor of New York because he considered it his duty to remain in his war post. He urged the nomination of Alfred E. Smith, who was elected. In 1920, Roosevelt worked for the nomination of President Wilson at the San Francisco convention. When James M. Cox was chosen to head the ticket, Roosevelt, then 38 years of age, was named as his running-mate by acclamation.)

INSTANTANEOUS

In the parade which ensued, the New York banner, heading the column, was followed by the Braves of Tammany.

The move was made with the foreknowledge and full approval of Boss Murphy. Of course, Roosevelt had helped the Tiger's favorite son, Alfred E. Smith. But the Democratic cause in that year was generally accepted as lost; and certainly Charles F. Murphy, foe of Wilson, had no overwhelming urge to bolster Cox's champion of the League of Nations.

Whatever the motive behind Tammany's support, Roosevelt would hardly have refused the nomination even though fully aware that a political tomb was being ground into shape for him. He was too much the earnest Wilsonian Democrat.

After the convention, he returned to Washington, cleared his desk and submitted his resignation from the navy department to President Wilson.

During the campaign he made more than 800 speeches—probably a record for American election stumping. He toured almost every section of the nation, including his literary towns surprisingly small, in his effort to push back defeat.

It was an interesting battle. On the other side of the political fence was Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., son of the ex-president. April 5, in Sheridan, Wyoming, Theodore was creating in behalf of Candidate Harding.

"What about Franklin Roosevelt?" yelled a heckler.

"Oh, he's a maverick," responded the speaker, "he doesn't have the brand of our family."

When the remark reached New York, and F. D. heard it, he grinned.

It was a preposterously one-sided battle, too.

The Republican leaders, sensing perfectly the feelings of the country, adopted as their slogan "Back to Normalcy." The cry expressed exactly the overwhelming desire of 1920 America. It became a byword and a universal sigh of relief.

The landslide was the most complete in American history and in Roosevelt's own state Warren G. Harding, Ohio senator and newspaper editor, was swept to victory with Calvin Coolidge by a majority of over a million votes.

Even Governor Smith, polling a million more votes than the national ticket, still was swept from office by the normally avalanche.

F. D. took the crushing defeat philosophically enough. He wrote the Harvard class secretary that he had been given an opportunity to see most of the nation.

He was tired; he needed rest. But his long-neglected business interests and law practice demanded his attention. Not until the following summer could he spare time for extended relaxation. In August, 1921, he left a sultry New York for his vacation cottage at Campobello Island. Shortly after his arrival there, he went swimming in the Bay of Fundy. When he returned to his house, he felt that he might have caught cold.

Seventy-two hours later he was fighting death, his legs partially paralyzed from the hips down.

Franklin D. Roosevelt will never forget that August afternoon.

It was a sultry hot day—a rarity for Campobello. With Mrs. Roosevelt and the children, he went on an all day picnic in a hired motor boat. On the way back the rolling smoke of a forest fire rudely interrupted the holiday. The fire was on another island, and at a point about two miles from the Roosevelt summer home.

"D. deserted his picnic and turned fire-fighter. He landed the boat and with his sons hurried to the burning woods. Beating the flames with spruce boughs, they finally succeeded in getting the fire under control; and after

JUDGE MORRISON AND HIS "GANG"

Below is pictured some 1200 cheering lads and their yell leader, Judge Kenneth Morrison. These boys are admitted free to local football games and use the east bleachers at Poly field. And when their yell leader calls upon them to "make it a big one"—well "what do you think?" —Photo by Rundell.

JUDGE EVOLVES NOVEL PLAN TO KEEP YOUNGSTERS OUT OF TROUBLE; BUILDS AMBITION

By MASON YOULD

Imagine a Saturday afternoon, no school in session, and the streets of Santa Ana conspicuous by the absence of boys.

Draw on your imagination again and picture a stern and staid judge going through all the gymnastics of a yell leader, megaphone and all. There you have Justice of the Peace Kenneth Morrison—on Saturday afternoons during the football season.

Now into the realm of reality. These boys never have been to high school. In fact, Judge Morrison says, they never had the desire to go to high school.

These boys coming and going in Morrison's court set him to thinking. He never had a high school education. He was afraid of high school, afraid of the bigger boys. Looking back now he sees things differently.

He pondered over the effect and strove to find a cause.

Then dawned on him the idea that if the younger lads could be inspired to want to go to high school, the problem might be solved.

Three years ago he tried out the idea of gathering all the children under 13 years of age to the high school football game. It worked, but the judge was in ill health and he dropped his plan until this year when he took it up in earnest.

Serves as Reward

This year he carried through his idea with success.

His plan is to have the principals and teachers of the elementary schools cooperate.

On Friday every child under the age of 13, whose studies are up to standard, is given a slip of paper admitting him to the football game on Saturday, free of cost. The slip contains the name of the child, his age, his school and class and is signed by principal and teacher.

This slip is presented at a certain gate at the football field. The children all are held until just a few minutes before the game when they are admitted in a body. Their entrance is quiet and probably their presence not noted unduly.

HOLD DISTRICT TOY DISPLAY LEGION MEET IS ATTRACTIVE: NEXT THURSDAY MORE NEEDED

The second meeting of the twenty-first district, American Legion will be held in the new Fullerton American Legion home on the night of December 2, according to an announcement made today by District Commander Herb Gray. The meeting is called for 7:30 p. m.

At the present time, it is pointed out, Riverside county leads the district in membership with Orange county second and San Bernardino third. Reports on membership are to be made and discussed and according to Membership Chairman Howard Scott, reports are likely to alter the standings of the three counties. He would not say that Orange county would take the lead, however.

Grover Fultz, Santa Ana, chairman of the district's Boy Scout activities is to make a report on activities during the past several months and will suggest a new plan whereby the district's 45 posts will take charge of at least one more Scout troop.

All posts in the district are working hard on the unemployment situation in the county and reports of various activities along this line are to be made at the meeting.

The Fullerton meeting is expected to be the highest of the year in Legion circles in Orange county this year and aside from a big turnout of Santa Ana members of the ex-service men's organization, a number of high ranking state officials are expected to be present.

Bright and freshly painted and repaired, hundreds of toys which will be given away to children of needy families in Santa Ana are on display in the store building at the northeast corner of Second and Main streets.

Every year members of the Santa Ana fire department spend much time and effort in collecting worn out toys from children that have outgrown them or who desire to share with others. These toys are repaired and painted to look like new, for use by Santa Ana children when he makes his annual visit.

Many children in Santa Ana will be made happy this year by receiving some of the toys which have been fixed up by the fire department, many of whom would not have received anything at all this Christmas.

The trouble is, although there seems to be a great many toys on display, according to Captain John Garthe, that there are not nearly enough to fill the needs this year and so an appeal was made today for anyone who has toys of any description to call the fire department and the old toys will be collected and placed to the best advantage at Christmas time. At the present time the firemen have nothing to work on.

4TH STRIP FOR COAST HIGHWAY

THREE ARCH BAY, Nov. 29.—Plans of the state highway commission for a 40-foot highway the entire length of the Orange county coast line were revealed at the meeting of the South Coast Improvement association at Hi-Hi tavern, Three Arch Bay. According to Crawford's report, following an interview with S. V. Cortelyou, division engineer, a fourth strip will be added on the upper side of the highway, and the work will be started, it is planned, within the next year. The highway has been graded to a width of 80 feet.

The engineer predicted that the Coast highway through Orange county will be the most heavily traveled in the state and declared that three traffic lanes are not sufficient to take care of the expected travel. With four lanes, slow vehicles will be kept to the outer lanes so that cars may pass in both directions without danger of accident.

Rapid progress is being made on the contract between Laguna Beach and Dana Point and the three traffic lanes now under construction will be open by the Christmas holidays. Two lanes now are open from Three Arch Bay to Dana Point, three lanes. One strip has been completed the entire length to the Laguna city limit.

Orange Hosts Preside At Informal Sunday Night Supper

An informal supper party, with all pretty appointments carried out in red and silver, was given Sunday night by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. King, who were hosts in their home, 215 North Cambridge street in Orange.

Those in the group included Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Harlow of Santa Ana; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Farrell of Santiago Canyon; and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hart of Orange, together with the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. King.

For the delicious supper served, guests were seated at a table whose centerpiece was a silver bowl filled with holly. White candles held with vivid red tulle soared from silver holders, and Dresden china nut cups added to the charm of the table, while champagne in deep rich shades, gave a lovely background. Much of the evening was devoted to informal reminiscing as hosts and guests gathered around a big fire crackling and blazing on the hearth. Mrs. Hart and Mrs. O'Farrell had attended boarding school together in girlhood days in Denver, Colo., and their recollections provided many merry tales. Sunday night was their first meeting in several years.

Local Mills Alumnae Anticipate Benefit Tea in January

Plans arranged for a bridge tea for Orange County Mills club members, to be given by Mrs. E. R. Roberts of Brea and by Mrs. Marvin Bryte in the latter's home at 525 Oak street Saturday afternoon resulted in a charming affair at which arrangements were discussed for a larger party in January.

The latter event will be a benefit tea, the Mills alumnae decided, and will be held Saturday, January 30, in the Doris Kathryn Tea Shoppe. Proceeds thus accrued will be applied on the Mills Alumnae fund maintained by the college, club members have revealed. Miss Diehl Comments On Extended Stay In England

Letsurely travel through Scotland, a six months' sojourn in northern England with occasional sallies to London, and a visit to the House of Lords in the British Houses of Parliament were among memories treasured by Miss Dorothy Diehl, as she returned at the week end to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Diehl of 2309 Bonnie Brae street.

The latter experience was an especially memorable one, Miss Diehl declared, the Santa Ana girl declaring herself particularly impressed with the imposing beauty of the famous group of buildings in which England's Parliament sits.

As a guest of her aunt, Mrs. L. Westoll, who resides in Coniscliffe Hall, in Darlington, Miss Diehl was permitted opportunities for the most intimate view of English life, opportunities extended to Scotland when she traveled up the west coast of the latter country, to return along the opposite shore. Visits to England's old castles and to historical spots in London proper filled the days of the Santa Ana girl, who spoke flatteringly of the hospitality of the English.

Miss Diehl, who sailed to England on the S. S. Adriatic, returned on the S. S. Majestic, continuing her sea voyage via Panama on the S. S. President Coolidge, from which she landed Saturday with Miss Allison Preston, her companion on the trip. Mrs. Westoll, who preceded her from New York, is enjoying a reunion with her sisters, Mrs. C. B. Diehl and Mrs. George S. Gannett of 2103 North Broadway.

Newlyweds Return From Mountains

Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Middlebrook have returned from their honeymoon trip to Lake Arrowhead, and have established their home at 626 South Parton street. Their marriage was an event of November 22, and took place in San Clemente.

The bride will be remembered as Miss Opal Haddock. Mr. Middlebrook has resumed his duties at a Union Oil station at 1702 North Broadway, where he is manager. Both he and Mrs. Middlebrook are graduates of Santa Ana high school.

You and your Friends

Mrs. Eunice Reid and her daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Hogue, and William Oglesby of Orange and Jack Fredericks of this city, together with Los Angeles friends, formed a party spending the past week end with Mr. Moore's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Moore returned Monday to their studies at University of Southern California.

Miss Adah Ruth Ellis, formerly of 210 French street, has moved to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Carrie Blackwood, 121 South Ross street. Mrs. Blackwood arrived here a short time ago from Greeley, Colo., and is spending the winter here.

Mrs. R. D. Crenshaw, 2815 Santiago avenue, who underwent an operation for appendicitis several days ago, is reported as making a satisfactory recovery at the Hollywood hospital. Mrs. Charles Roemer, East Santa Clara avenue, is reported as seriously ill in her home here. She has been in ill health for the past two months, and in a critical condition for the past week. With her are her daughters, Mrs. A. C. Kirchhoff of Mesa, Ariz., and Mrs. William Snyder of Los Angeles.

Daughter-in-law Plans Enjoyable Informal Birthday Party

It is such a usual thing for Mrs. John Mills to catch up a bit of needlework and drop in at the home of her husband's mother, Mrs. J. S. Mills, 1077 West First street, for a pleasant afternoon of sewing and chat, that her arrival last Friday, occasioned no surprise on the part of the senior Mrs. Mills.

Nor did the arrival of a neighbor seem at all unusual, but when one by one, others of her neighborhood friends dropped in, Mrs. Mills finally realized that it was the working out of a clever plan to aid her in the celebration of her birthday anniversary.

Mrs. John Mills had engineered the affair, and suggested that each guest bring her sewing, as the afternoon was to be one of those pleasantly informal ones in which tongues and fingers run a merry race. To complete the special features of the affair, she had arranged to serve a refreshment course which included a prettily decorated birthday cake. When Mrs. J. S. Mills was accorded the honor of cutting the cake, she had the pleasure also of unwrapping a collection of attractive gifts selected for her by her friends.

In the party in addition to the birthday honoree, Mrs. J. S. Mills, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Mills, were Mrs. A. B. Lewis, John McBride, Mrs. Albert Almond and Mrs. R. W. Shaver.

ANN MEREDITH'S

MIXING BOWL

Delicious Tamale Pie
Hard colds often grab us right at the moment when we are most vulnerable to the last degree. A few minutes rest, perhaps something hot to drink often wards off the wretched cold we are apt to develop when overdone.

Do you know how to really relax? Read the Mixing Bowl tomorrow.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Tamale Pie

11-2 pounds lean beef and 1-4 pound beef suet
11-2 dozen ripe olives
3 cloves of garlic, minced
1 green pepper, minced
1 teaspoon chili powder (mexine)
Good pinch of cayenne
1 dozen raisins
Salt and pepper ad lib.
Hot water to cook meat
2 tablespoons corn meal for thickening.

Fry the fat out of the suet, dice the meat and brown lightly in the fat. Cover with water and simmer until tender. Estimate the water so there will be sufficient to fill the baking dish with gravy. Add the minced garlic and green pepper to the meat and thicken with corn meal. Other seasonings, whole olives and raisins are now added, and the crust prepared.

For the crust use:
2-3 cup lard
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups hot water
1 rounded cup white corn meal.
Bring lard and water to a boil, add salt, slowly sift in the corn meal and stir constantly until the mixture is thick enough to attempt to leave the sides of the vessel.

When it cools, line bottom and sides of casserole, reserving enough to cover the top. Carefully put in the meat and gravy, spread the remaining crust over the top and bake in a medium hot oven 40 minutes.

This dish will serve about eight people. The calory total will be around 450 per person. Offset the fat and starch in this dish by serving a leafy cooked vegetable (cauliflower, cabbage, spinach, etc.) salad and a dessert, using fruit, or a baked custard.

Wednesday—Apple Sauce Layer Cake.

Ebell Club Founding Commemorated With Yule Play, Tea

Recurrence of an anniversary which has been signalized in 37 out of the 38 years that have passed since Santa Ana Ebell society's inception drew a great crowd to the club's auditorium yesterday to share in the latest Founder's Day festivities.

Recognition was paid this date by the appearance on the platform of Mrs. J. R. Medlock of this city, in whose home Santa Ana Ebell society took form November 25, 1894. Mrs. W. S. Bartlett of Los Angeles, who held the club's first presidency, was unable to be present.

Introduced by Mrs. Paul Bailey, president, Mrs. Medlock commented briefly on the growth and progress of the organization since its founding and commended the club on its recent expansion through the two junior societies. Representing the latter groups on the stage were the two presidents, Mrs. Robert S. Wade of the Junior club and Miss Janet Diehl of the Girls' club.

The program, verging on December and the Christmas holidays, was a foretaste of the season's pleasures, opening with a playlet, "Top o' the City" by Margaret Barbick Purcell, which embodied the Christmas theme. Laid on top floor of an old New York boarding house, the brief drama unfolded as a tale of a crippled orphan girl, whose generosity of heart and brave outlook found a foil in the selfish and rebellious daughter of the home, the two characters played respectively by Anna Moultrie and Margaret Carlisle. Playlet opposite them were Guy Dennison and Flinley McDerby, who took respective parts as the young lord and as the play-acting friend of the orphan. The right friend of the orphan, Christmas Eve, was pleasantly presented, carrying the orphan girl through a series of minor vicissitudes before drawing to a happy close with the disclosure, by radio, that she had won the grand prize which playwriting contest, a sum which would enable her to regain her normal health through an operation.

Persuaded into a Christmas mood by the play, Ebell members and their guests were doubly appreciative of holiday decorations discovered as they entered the peacock room following the program. Everywhere Christmas tree hung with glistening red and blue baubles, the table from which tea was served was beautifully laid with tall red tapers, green strands of holly berries, and red and green mints. Officiating at the tea were a group of past presidents, Mesdames S. M. Davis, S. W. Stanley, F. E. Coulter and R. G. Tuthill.

Members were received at the door by another group consisting of Mrs. Paul Bailey, Mrs. J. R. Medlock, who were a core of violets presented her by the club; Mrs. A. J. Cruickshank, who, with Mrs. G. M. Bacon was alone among charter members represented; Mrs. Robert S. Wade and Miss Janet Diehl.

Mrs. W. B. Williams, chairman of the hospitality committee, directed the serving of the tea course with Miss Mary Bailey, who occupies a similar office in the Junior society. Working with them were Mesdames Joseph H. Metzgar, Perry E. Lewis, C. F. Skirvin, W. W. Roy, E. B. Sprague, D. G. Spurgeon, Charles Vance, Alex. Brownridge, H. B. Van Dien, Edward Walker, A. J. Lasby, R. E. Coulter and A. J. Melanthin; the Misses Boyd Johnson, Lolita Mead, Nan Mead and Mrs. Edward Lee Russell.

Announcements made at the meeting called attention to the Woman's club lecture to be held Thursday in the First Methodist church; to the address of Dr. Earl Miller at Willard junior high school December 6 under the auspices of University of California alumni; to activities of the Day Nursery board and to the Music Art and Drama section's program Friday at 2 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Sherman Stevens. A cooked food sale was conducted in the lobby by the Day Nursery board.

BIG DOUBLE BILL AT WEST COAST

A double feature bill which brings a number of stars in two big pictures to Santa Ana, is seen at the Fox West Coast theater today and tomorrow.

The pictures are "Faithless," starring Robert Montgomery and Tallulah Bankhead, and "The Crooked Circle," featuring Ben Lyon, James Gleason and Zasu Pitts.

"Faithless" brings to the screen for the first time Montgomery and Bankhead together in a picture. It is a modern drama that is strong with romance and clever lines and is a picture that any adult type of audience will enjoy.

"The Crooked Circle" is a mystery comedy in which many strange things happen and which gives Zasu Pitts a big opportunity with her peculiar brand of comedy. There is much action and suspense.

TESS' ANOTHER BIG JANET GAYNOR HIT

Leaving the tranquil Middle West setting of "The First Year" for the stern and rockbound cliffs of Maine, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell delighted the audiences at the Fox Broadway theater again yesterday with their new Fox film, "Tess of the Storm Country." Most of the action of the screen play takes place along the New England coast.

Grace Miller White's story and the dramatization by Rupert Hughes, have been transformed into a gripping picture which ranks with the best of the Gaynor-Farrell productions for romance, and easily surpasses them all for thrills and excitement.

Janet's performance as the fiery-tempered fisher-girl is outstanding, and Farrell affords a perfect contrast as the millionaire's carefree son.

Notable support is furnished by Dudley Digges, Claude Gillingwater, June Clyde, Edward Paw-water, and DeWitt Jennings, and here is special commendation for Alfred Santell's smooth direction.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The hotytots were strange to see. In fact, as funny as you'd be. Their little bodies make the time stare and laugh out loud.

Said Scouty, "My, but they are fat and each one wears a broad-brimmed hat. In other places I don't think such hats would be allowed."

"Do you suppose that we're safe here, or is there something we should fear? Perhaps the little hotytots will shortly injure us."

"Out of the crater they all crawled and now upon the ground they're sprawled. I wonder if they're resting or they start an awful fuss?"

One of the hotytots had heard wee Scouty—every single word. He stood up and then answered, "Why, we are a friendly lot. "We'd be real glad to play with you and do whatever you want to do. We came out of the crater "cause the place grew much too hot."

Then Windy ran up very near and said, "As long as we are here we're going to stay until we find out if you'll treat us fair. "Start right now to have your fun and we will join you, one by one. As long as you don't play mean pranks, we really will not care."

The little hotytots shook hands and said, "You've been to many lands, but we will lead you to a new one that's the best of all. "Right down the mountain we will climb and reach this strange place in no time. You Tynmites just follow us. Be careful, though, don't fall."

They hadn't traveled very far until one of them cried, "There you are! That's Weeland," and he pointed to a town far, far below. "Just wait until you've seen its sights. I know they'll please you Tynmites. From one end to the other we will take you, if you'll go."

Amazing Jungle Artist who TAUGHT HIMSELF How To Paint

One of the pictures painted by the jungle artist who taught himself to paint. . . .

Shan's symbolic picture of a group containing three heads, three pairs of arms and legs and six bodies . . . representing his tribe's idea of the figure from which the race evolved.

By ETTA MAE WALLACE

SHAN, a jungle man of Burma, lived 30 years before he ever saw a picture, yet just three months after he saw his first one he produced a book of paintings so fine they have amazed artists and museum officials throughout the world.

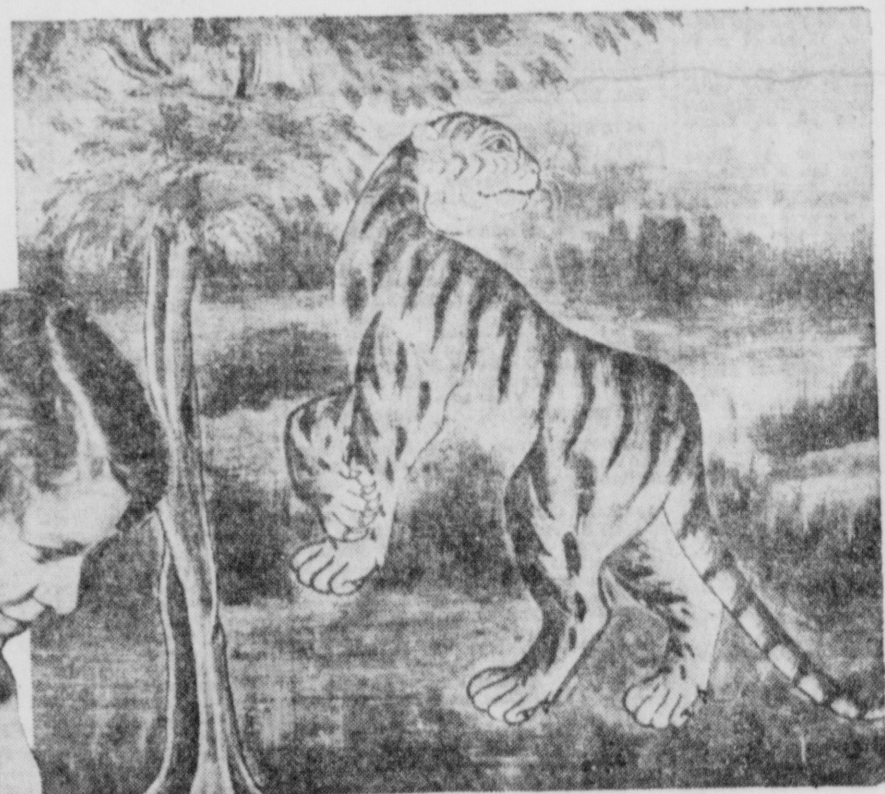

Until he saw that picture Shan knew only the lore of the jungle—where the mangoes grew the largest, where to gather water potatoes, bamboo shoots, jackfruits and the plentiful plantains. He knew how to flee from the tiger and how to trap and train the elephant.

There were no artists in his family or among his neighbors. Rather there were head-hunters, brewers of potent rice whisky, and smokers of opium.

There were no art supplies—paper, pencils, brushes, ink, paints. These he had to make from raw materials which he procured from the jungle.

It was in the home of Elva Jenkins (now Mrs. Clarence Hender-

Shan had never seen a painting until a missionary showed him one, and then he made his own paper and paints and produced sketches that have won highest praise from critics everywhere

These two pictures show Shan's picturization of a jungle legend about six Chinese who met a tiger while walking in the jungle. . . . Quickly the Chinese formed themselves into the shape of an elephant . . . and the tiger, frightened, slunk away.

Mrs. Clarence Hendershot, the missionary who showed Shan the only painting he ever saw . . . photographed with his book of paintings in her hands.

shot) that Shan saw that first picture. She was attached to the outermost hospital that the Baptists have established in Burma. It is a 15-day journey by elephant back from the nearest semblance of civilization.

SHAN had hurried from his native hut, when his wife lay ill with malignant malaria, to get the nurse to treat her. A tropical storm was raging and Mrs. Hendershot asked Shan to come in while she prepared to return with him.

Then he saw the picture. It was a cheap print of Maxfield Parrish's "At Dawn."

His errand was urgent, but it was forgotten. He forgot everything in the intensity of his wonder at this thing which was like a person, but was not a person.

He had never imagined such a thing!

Mrs. Hendershot answered the questions of Shan patiently as one would answer a child.

THERE was much that she could not very well explain, for there were no shops, even in the village where the Swaba, the native ruler, lived, where the simplest artists' materials could be purchased. Naturally she made no attempt whatever to explain any rudiments of perspective, balance or color harmony.

After Shan left her home he did not ever have an opportunity of going back to gaze on the print. His mind, as far as pictures were concerned, was like a clean photographic plate. The shock of seeing this first one acted like a flashlight exposure and perfectly impressed the marvel and the possibilities of this art.

He thought: "I shall put my people and my neighbors on paper."

Shan could scarcely be torn away from the picture. Important questions were being asked him. He countered with the questions which were crowding his simple native intellect.

How did one imprison likenesses of human beings, trees, mountains, color of dawn, on paper?

What would he need to make one?

AND that is what he did. There are 18 hill tribes which are governed by the same Swaba. Like Noah getting the animals ready for the ark, this Shan picked out two of a kind, a male and a female, and he pictured them.

These pictures, in an uncanny way, tell the story of each tribe.

Shan had not even paper to begin with. No paper could be bought, but from the priests he could find out how to make it.

So Shan went to the crude village temple and asked how to make paper. According to instructions, he gathered much rice straw and put it to soak. He then waited for it to reach the consistency of a rotten pulp. During the days that he waited he went to the jungle storehouse for paints and brushes.

For his black paint Shan peeled from the trees the bright, sticky juice which the stic lac spins. With infinite care he pressed berries, he crushed leaves and soaked roots to make them give up their colors for the wonderful likenesses he was to make of his people.

WHAT confidence in his ability this inexperienced native must have had to spend his energy so infinitely on these first details!

When finally he had gathered his materials and had rolled the rice straw into paper, this artist began.

The thrill of putting that first line of color on paper of his own creating! Excitement of the moment burned away the limitations of his jungle life. He stood an artist in his own right, a master with immortals!

His friends crowded about to see this new art—magic to them.

How he rose in their estimation! Gladly the natives posed for him. With patience they waited for him to put them on paper. As members of each of the hill tribes came to the Swaba's village they heard of his great undertaking, and in their gay costumes they posed for him.

Besides picturing the tribesmen, Shan put in the front of his book a strangely perfect geometrical picture of three heads, three pairs of legs and arms, with six bodies.

HE explained that all Shans believe that from some such figure man evolved. That he could have illustrated this mystical idea, which he had only heard about, is almost incredible.

The book was his conception and his creation, from the very paper to the last fine drawing and coloring of the brilliant green beetle which decorates the bodice of a native dancer. There are 25 pictures.

When, at the end of three months, he had finished the folio, he brought it as a gift of gratitude to the nurse, Mrs. Hendershot, who had successfully brought his wife through her illness.

When the young missionary nurse had to come home in 1928 (she met her husband, a professor of the Judson Memorial University at Rangoon, on the boat), she brought her "memory book" with her.

But it was not until a few months ago, when she went to visit her husband, who was taking his Ph. D. degree at the University of Chicago, that she "remembered" to get the book out of packing and show it. She thought the new museum of Oriental studies might be interested.

And they were! It was the greatest find on Burma Indian art that had ever come their way. The fame of the book spread. It was sent for by the Cleveland Art Institute, and from there it went to the Columbia Art Institute at Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Hendershot has had flattering offers for the book. She says that some day she will let it go to a museum, but as yet she feels that it is invaluable to her in telling the story of these people whom she loves, and whom she would like to bring again into the stream of civilization, so that such genius as this book reveals might not be hidden forever.

IT seems a bit ironical to note that the real name of the artist is not known. "Shan," the name given him, is really his tribal name. He signed none of his paintings. He did not know that was customary. The little missionary to whom he gave his treasure, is sorry that she did not "get" his name.

Various haphazard explanations have been offered as to why this untrained native was able to turn out these pictures. One, frankly spiritualistic, is that some great artist worked through him as a medium. Another, along the same line, is that he himself in "another life" had been an artist.

A third is that at some ancient time pictures were known to and made by his ancestors, and his ability to make them so finely is a miracle of racial inheritance.

The fourth explanation is that being a jungle man he lived off its bounty and in terror of it, the savage mother, ever ready to devour her own. This made it so that his well-being and his very life depended on his powers of observation, his ability to find his food, and to see his enemies first. And in this ability to observe keenly and closely lay the secret of his success in being able to put likenesses on paper.

His idea of picturing the tribesmen when Mrs. Hendershot served in the hospital might have come from his desire to give her something to remember them by. He suggested as much when he made the gift.

Mrs. Hendershot went to that field expecting to assist a doctor in charge of the hospital. But the doctor, due to illness, did not arrive and she was in charge for 13 months. She trained a few natives to help her, but she was really everything: chief surgeon, pharmacist, chemist, dietician, and cooler of fevered brows.

COURT UPHOLDS BAN ON SHULER
RADIO CONTROL

Reverend R. P. Shuler's appeal to the district court of the United States found the court backing the Radio Commission, in ruling his radio station off the air.

There are two phases of this decision, one which it seems to us has a ground of validity, the other virtually amounts to censorship. The valid legal argument for a defense of the Radio Commission, is that while Mr. Shuler or any other man has the right of free speech, there is no obligation upon the government to furnish him a service so that he can amplify his individual voice, for its extension, a million-fold.

This argument is based on the assumption that society, or the state, has the ownership, and must have the ownership and control of the various frequencies which are used in the air. If this position be granted, then of course the frequencies must be given by the government to those whom it believes will use them to the best interest of society as a whole.

In other words, it is not the right of a man to do anything more than present his claims to the frequency. He doesn't own the frequency, society or the government owns the right of the frequency, and the government does not believe that in his case it is being used as well as the same frequency would be used for society's good by someone else who is clamoring for it. Then the question is really upon the matter as to the judgment that the government or the Federal Radio commission exercises, whether they are right in their conclusions or wrong.

The legal phases of it are absolutely settled, and of course the Federal Radio Commission is the voice of the government, and whether we agree with the members or not, the commission must have the final determination.

Now, while we can see this legal argument, when it comes to the discussion of the reasons why they reached the conclusion they did, we are hardly in a mood to agree at all. For here the Federal Radio commission, and the attorneys for them, contend that the criticisms, or so-called "attacks" made by Mr. Shuler over the air on various institutions are wrong, tend to disturb and disrupt society, etc., etc.

We hardly know of any group or institution that Mr. Shuler has not criticized. Some of these institutions are very dear to us. Most of them have commanded our respect and support. And yet we would not deny to any man his right to criticize any one of them, and of course, it is true that in proportion as the criticism might be justified, the critic would be helping the institution in fulfilling its function for society.

There is no doubt but what Mr. Shuler's criticisms have helped clean up certain phases of our political life. Certain men are in the penitentiary, punished for their misdoings, for which Mr. Shuler should receive the credit. It is natural, in the midst of all this, that many bitter enemies should be united, some with good motives, and some with bad motives, but all of them agreeing in keeping Mr. Shuler off the air.

In spite of criticisms, which we feel many times are unjustified, and statements certainly that Mr. Shuler has not been able to justify, and in some cases in which he must have been grossly mistaken, if not worse, we have felt that he was probably doing more good than harm. The examiner for the Federal Radio commission came to this conclusion, and so reported to the Federal Radio commission. If we were on the Federal Radio Commission, therefore, we would probably grant him the license. But we are not. The Federal Radio Commission, in the light of all the facts, feels that it is justified in its conclusions.

We are inclined to believe that from a legal point of view, even on the ground of free speech, their argument is pretty sound, providing the individual has no inherent right to the frequency through the air. And of course, if we would admit that he had, then all men would have it and no man could use it.

The very moment that a man contends that he has a right to any frequency in the air, he must acknowledge that any other man has the same right. But no man can exercise that right, without the government denying to every other man in its vicinity, the use of that frequency for that period of time. So that he must, in the end, depend upon government for his protection, and his use of the radio.

The logic of it is that society must take care of it. And the consensus of society, as organized, is against the use by this particular person, or at least against his ownership and use, according to his own judgment. Mr. Shuler can still use the radio, but he must use it subject to the conditions laid down by the Federal Radio Commission.

But we wonder if the Federal Radio Commission and the courts see where they are going in this affair. If this is a government proposition, why then should any man or group of men get a corner upon these frequencies, or upon any frequency, so that they can determine its use commercially, and make enormous amounts of money from practically a government institution, and ruin other people financially who may be or would be competitors?

SWIMMING MAIL MAN RETIRES

For eleven years G. S. Ramsay has been swimming from the Island of Niuafoou in the Tonga group to ships, during weather too rough for a boat to hazard the rollers. He was the mail man and, faithful to the service, on such occasions he towed back to the island a forty-pound biscuit can containing the mail. The length of his route was about a mile. After eleven years Ramsay has retired and is en route to Vista, California, where he will raise chickens.

There are some thrilling stories told about the faithfulness of mail men who brave cold blasts and harsh weather of all sorts to carry mail over difficult routes to isolated places. There are not so many hard routes as there used to be. Roads have been improved everywhere. There still remains, even where roads are good and there is an automobile or a strong boat to carry the mail, the responsibility of being punctual and reliable.

If there is a mail story to match this one of the swimming mail man, whose familiarity with sharks who accompanied his swim removed all fear from his association with them, we would like to hear it.

SOUND AS A TOOL

In the scientific journal of the American Physical Society there was announced the other day the discovery that sound can be utilized as a tool. A screeching sound charred to cinders the centers of corks. The corks, so the report states, were burned by sound alone. Sound energy transforms into heat so fast that in about twenty-five seconds hot gases burst a hole in the cork.

This explains why concert halls get so hot before the evening is over.

The sound which burned the cork was emitted from a whistle, a small nickel tube about as wide as a policeman's whistle though about three times as long. The sound is painful to the ear drum and experimenters have been working with cotton in their ears.

Experiments and discoveries such as this have a tendency to remove fear for the future when this or that natural resource which they today are using has been exhausted. Pressed by necessity the scientist will utilize just such discoveries to insure man against an uncomfortable future.

EMPLOYMENT INCREASES

According to the reports out of Washington, there was a general increase in employment throughout the country in October. This is the fourth consecutive month that there has been such an increase, and this applies in California.

While unfortunately the number of people employed is not as large as it was a year ago, yet there has been the increase these months that there was not a year ago. So, proportionately, we are getting better off. The evidences are constant and increasing that we have passed the biggest sag in the road.

Toying With War

The Christian Science Monitor

The need for the early training of children to think naturally in terms of peace rather than in terms of war was stressed by Mrs. Corbett Ashby, British substitute delegate to the Disarmament Conference, recently.

In view of the growing realization of the necessity for disarmament, it is surprising to find that leading toy manufacturers are still turning out warlike toys as fast as they can be produced in order to keep pace with the demand. There is no slackening off in the sale of toy soldiers, forts, battleships, and mechanical tanks. In fact, they cannot be made quickly enough, which forces one to the conclusion that the general public, which is said to be definitely opposed to war, is unwittingly fostering the ideas of war in the hearts of the coming generation.

It is significant, in this connection, that toy manufacturers, as a general rule, are showing little if any willingness to welcome peace toys as a substitute for war toys. When a young German woman, weary of witnessing the sufferings that are still resulting from the hostilities that terminated fourteen years ago, recently brought to the notice of British manufacturers peace games she had originated and designed, she found herself, with one exception, up against the determined belief that peace games would not sell.

Of course, it remains a question whether as much ingenuity has been expended on peace toys as upon those inspired by war. There may be opportunity for invention along this line.

The nursery is the world in miniature, and the Peter who winds up the tank he has been given at Christmas in order that it may demolish the fort just presented to John, is the same Peter who may be influenced to do precisely the same things, though on a larger scale, to the possessions of older Johns in the future.

A Brighter View

San Francisco Chronicle

Here is an optimistic note from Geneva, one which has nothing to do with armaments or debts, or even the League of Nations. Directors of the Bank of International Settlements, a group which is peculiarly well informed on conditions in the Old World, have been meeting in the city which is favored for important conferences, and the general view of these financiers is that the times are bettering.

Conditions in Germany, Austria, France and Italy, they say, contrast most favorably with those of a year ago and, all and all, the prospect for better days is brightening. A word of that kind from Europe has been awaited. It is to be welcomed joyfully when it comes from the sober judgment of men who are familiar with world-wide conditions and who for many months have been chary with their predictions.

There is an assurance in the fact that the opinion has to do with conditions as they exist and are not linked with any consideration of the war debt situation. These men feel that, regardless of what is done in the matter of debts, things look better. Perhaps they do not take that problem so seriously as do many of the statesmen who speak vigorously and dolorously in the hope of results, or as do some people in this country.

Japan is "buying" Manchuria all over again, at a price vastly greater than its people can afford to pay. Japan won its ascendancy in Manchuria by winning the Russo-Japanese war, and the cost of that exploit was reflected in a national debt increase of approximately $300,000,000. Now, fighting China by modern methods to enforce the same claim, Japan faces the prospect of having to borrow something like $363,000,000 in the current two-year period. The rate of expenditure is greater now than it was 30 years ago. This new purchase will cost more than the former one.

And there is now no more evidence than there was 30 years ago, that Manchuria will stay bought.

I'd like to own a little cot
In some half hidden shady spot
Where robins sing
Through all the spring
Beside a ruffled river;
Where rabbits scamper through the glade
And foxes wander unafraid,
And lilies look
Upon the brook
Where timid aspens shiver.

I'd also like to have a home
Where crested breakers cream and foam,
And seagulls glide
With scarce a hint of motion.
I'd like to watch the distant sails
That bow and dip before the gales,
While sunset dyes
In rainbow-wise
The bosom of the ocean.

Moreover, I should like a flat
In some great urban habitat,
With distant views
Of avenues,
And towering spires—I love them.
But though I covet spots like these
Where I, in happy idle ease
Would love to dwell,
I know full well
I shan't have ANY of them.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THE MACHINE COMES OF AGE

Since man fashioned his first crude tool, the enterprise of production has gone through three distinct phases. They are:

(1) Production with tools. This was the handicraft phase of production. The motive power was man's muscle. The instrument was a tool.

(2) Production with machines. This was the early machine age phase of production. In this early phase, relatively speaking, there was not so much difference between production with machines and production with tools, because the early machines were little more than improved tools, so that men were still needed to run the machines as men were needed to handle the old tools. There was, from the first, something of the thing we have lately begun to call by the high-brow name of technological unemployment. But not enough to bring mankind to the end of the era. At the outset almost every machine had to have one or more workers to run it. Had the machine age got no further than machines that were but improved tools we might have effected the necessary readjustments and gone on indefinitely with our older form of political and economic organization. But a third phase was in the offing.

(3) Production with technological mechanisms. I dislike this lumbering and difficult phase, but I do not know how better to describe the present phase of production in which engineering genius has so organized and correlated the machines themselves that factories can function with fewer and fewer human workers, reaching at times the goal of a virtually manless factory.

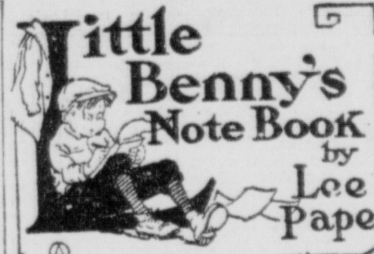

Most of the talk and writing about the machine age has had to do with the second phase—production with machines that were little more than improved tools which still needed many human hands to work them—a phase which lasted down to about twenty years ago.

As readers of these articles know, I have never taken much stock in the ruling against the machine age of this second phase, but this third phase, with the manless factory as its goal, is a different matter. I still do not bemoan its coming. Rightly administered it can bring us into a new and higher culture, but it has already confronted us with the fact that there would not be room or need for one-half of our present unemployed even if all of our factories could, by executive order, be put back on their 1929 schedule tomorrow morning.

What does this mean? It means that whether we like it or not, we must ruthlessly re-consider our present wage system, price system, profits system, and our whole concept of the role of politics in the enterprise of production. It is a new civilization that this third phase of production has created, and we cannot live in it if we cling blindly to the old tools.

This is the real problem, the root problem, that confronts Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Democratic party as they come into power in the most crucial hour of American history.

I was downtown with ma and we was in Hookbinder's department store and ma let me get a choicidit soda at the soda fountain by special request, and she left me there drinking it while she went to look at stockings, and when she came back she said, 'Well of all things, now you kindly tell me how anybody in possession of their human faculties could go and get a mess like that on them?'

Meaning a big stane all down the front of my overcoat, and I said, 'Well G. ma, I was seeing how far I could tip the glass over without spilling any, and its not my fault if it tipped all a ways over, is it?'

No, its the man in the moon's fault, the idee of giving me such a brazen face excuse, ma said, and I said, 'Well gosh, ma, you asked me how it happened, and ma said, 'Keep quiet now I've got to go and get a bottle of cleansing material rite away because I'm not going to be seen in public with any such spectacle as that.'

And we went to the drugstore, department, ma saying, I want something to remove a stane, and the man saying, 'Yes madam, here's a bottle of the famous Court Kleener, 35 cents.'

Well I should say not, 35 cents for a little bottle of cleaning fluid, how ridiculous, I should say not, ma said, and the man said, 'Well just as it happens I can offer you a trial bottle of Siamese Stane Remover, of course its not the regular full size bottle, its just a special trial bottle put out for advertizing purposes at 85 cents. Is it good?' ma said, and the man said, 'O yes, its the famous Siamese Stane Remover, and ma said, 'Well I'll take a trial bottle. Which she did, removing the stane perfect up in the ladies room.

14 Years Ago Today

NOVEMBER 29, 1918

The handsome new marble First National bank building of Fullerton was nearing completion after having been under construction since April when the old building was wrecked by an earthquake in Anaheim, the new telephone building on Lemon street was nearly in readiness for the installation of telephone equipment.

Mrs. C. C. Langley received word that her brother, Edward J. Miller of Huron, S. D., a 100 cent Republican, had defeated H. C. Howe, Democrat, in the state senatorial race.

Judge W. H. Thomas returned from Camp Kearny where he had been called to deliver two Thanksgiving addresses on the previous day.

"F. U. H. S." painted in large letters on different buildings of the high school group, indicated that Fullerton students had paid their respects to Santa Ana schools on Thanksgiving. The letters were painted on heavily and could not be removed.

Willard Stark and Lionel Barker left for San Francisco having enlisted as engineers in the merchant marine.

"Tom, where is your cap?"
"I lost it."
"You lost it? Where?"
"I don't know."
"You don't know. Do you suppose that all I have to do is buy you one cap after another? Now you go look for that cap until you find it."
"I don't know where to look."
"Neither do I. You lost it. You find it!"
After a brief interval Tom comes back. "Well, did you find it?"
"No. I looked everywhere but it isn't there."
"I suppose so. I'll have to buy you another cap. That makes five this term. I don't know what is going to come of you if you don't take care of your things."

Why buy him another one? It won't hurt him to do without his cap. Many a boy never wears a cap, except on very stormy days. Even if he has to go to church and Sunday School hatless, what of it? He doesn't wear a hat in church anyway. And if he really wanted a cap he wouldn't lose it so many times.

I believe that is true. If a child really wants a thing he won't lose it. He is conscious of the thing he wants to keep. He loses a thing he is not conscious of wanting. The way to get him to keep his hat is to make him conscious of needing it. That you do by letting him go without it.

That goes for other things that he loses and forgets. Do not replace it and make him go without until he replaces it if possible. A nine year old boy, or girl, has little notion of the values of things like books, hats, shoes, rubbers, mittens, balls. They need one and ask for it. They get it. They have no trouble in getting it. Just a request and there it is.

There was no experience to impress the transaction on the mind of the child. It is promptly forgotten. Let him lose the object and do without. Let him earn it for himself, and I'll promise you he will remember it next time.

A child forgets and loses the things he doesn't want to keep in mind or pocket. The poor report is lost or forgotten. The good one, never. The promised treat is always remembered while the dreaded chore is forgotten as easily as a slate is wiped clean.

When you find that a child is forgetting certain things, losing other things, habitually, consider the reason. Study why he wants to lose or forget. There is always a reason. The child's mind is always on his side. It helps him to forget and to lose undesirable thoughts. It closes them out with a finality that is as complete as darkness at midnight. Find the reason.

Don't accuse the child of willfully forgetting. He does not willfully forget or lose the unpleasant thing or idea. He is unconscious of his desire to forget and to lose. Remove the cause of his desire and put something desirable in its stead. Give him experiences that will make him conscious of his need to remember and hold on, and he will do both.

OR SOME PUPILS, MAKING GRADES IS UPHILL WORK!

Time To Smile

FRIGHTENED THE BEAST

"Maybe she isn't much to look at now, but she must have been very attractive in her youth."
"What makes you think that?"
"Well, she told me that a horse ran away with her once."—Tit-Bits.

NO DANGER

The two actresses were having tea together, and among the topics of conversation that came up was burglary.
"I always feel safe when there's a man in the house," remarked the brunette.
"I don't see why you shouldn't, dear," purred the blonde.—Mous-tique, Charlerol.
